Country Life in Italy.

At the age of ten or twelve the boys are sent to a "seminario," the girls to a convent, to be educated; but in what their education consists is a mystery. An Italian lady whose education had been completed at a most fashionable convent asked me if it was really necessary to cross the sea in order to get to England. My explanation that England was an island did not enlighten her at all, for she did not know that "island" meant land surrounded by water. The boys are very thankful when allowed to exchange the priest's dress they are obliged to wear at their school for secular garments, but they are often kept in the "seminario" to be out of mischief until past twenty. The father finds them on their return singularly devoid of all useful information and all practical ideas. The only occupation to which they kindly take is "la caccia," and they seldom, through life, pursue any other avocation with much zest.

One, maybe, has abilities—ambition—wishes to do something in the world; but it is too late now to take to a profession. He has wasted the best years of his youth—or, rather, they have been wasted for him—and he complains bitterly that he is fit for nothing but a priest. A priest he will not be; neither is he content to remain at home, with nothing but his miserable, younger son's portion to live upon. (Half the entire fortune goes to the eldest son, and the other half is divided in equal portions among the remaining children.) This son, naturally the best endowed, too often turns out the black sheep of the family. The daughters, on their return from the convent, are subjected to a discipline almost as strict as that of the nuns. They may never leave the house except with their father, neither mother nor brother being considered escort enough. They are not allowed to read any books but fashion books, and they are locked into their rooms at night. I knew one imaginative girl who employed her time during which she was locked into her room in writing thrilling romances, which before morning she burnt. When emancipated by marriage from paternal control, she broke out, but only in the way of literature. She cared neither for balls nor theaters, but literally devoured books, and to her credit, be it said, she did not confine herself to novels. History, science, metaphysics—nothing came amiss to her. What must not an intelligent girl, with a taste for reading, have suffered during twenty years of such unnatural repression! The serious occupation of the Italian young lady is embroidery for her trousseau, or "corredo," as she would call it; and many a bride can produce hundreds of chemises, petticoats, etc., all elaborately embroidered, and arranged in drawers, each dozen tied with different colored ribbon. She will tell you she began this work at seven years old. In spite of the size of the house, the numerous family (for when the sons marry they remain with their wives and children under the paternal roof) and the extensive scale on which hospitality is exercised, the servants are few—two or three at the utmost—and those few find plenty of time in which to gossip and amuse themselves. But, then, Italian ideas of what constitute comfort and cleanliness are not ours. The large, bare saloons are uninhabited, except on grand occasions. The family sit in a dingy room on the ground floor, stone-paved and carpetless, furnished with a couple of benches against the walls, a table in the middle and one arm-chair. The stone floor is never scrubbed, the windows are cleaned once in a generation, the furniture is dusted but rarely. There are no fireplaces, and a bath is required but once or twice in the course of the year. The only breakfast is a tiny cup of black coffee, taken in bed. There is no separate cookery for children or servants. The former feed with their parents, and the latter eat what remains after the family have dined. Dinner, which takes place about mid-day, is certainly an elaborate affair. It begins with raw ham and various species of sausage "salami," also raw; then comes the "minestra," chicken broth with rice or macaroni in it; then the "lesso"—that is, the chickens of which the soup has been made, eaten usually with rice; then perhaps a dish of vegetables—beans, peas, or cabbage, according to the season, followed by an "arrosto." The roast is usually either lamb or chicken; mutton and beef are seldom eaten, but "manzo"—veal verging on beef—is occasionally to be seen; then will come some sweet dish or "fritto," then more meat in "humido" (stew), until one begins to think the repast will never end. On fast days the meat is replaced by fish—usually the red mullet, with which this coast abounds—and eggs, either baked in a dish or made into an omelet. In the spring, junkets identical with those for which Devonshire is famous, but made of ewe's instead of cow's milk, form part of the repast. Besides the junket, or "cuagliata," as it is called, the ewe's milk supplies other sweet dishes—"ricotto," which resembles a very rich buttermilk, and "giuncata," which is more of the consistence of cream-cheese, and made in the form of rushes. Cream-cheeses there are, too, and when they are salted they keep and harden. Ewe's milk is the only milk used. Cattle are kept only for work; it follows that butter is not a product of the country. Olive oil supplies its place, when you are used to it, very well. Dinner is generally followed by coffee, and the family eat and drink no more until supper at nine or ten o'clock. This meal is more simple than the dinner. Soup is again de rigueur, but there may not be more than one other dish besides the salad and the cheese which ends the repast. To supper guests often drop in, and they sit a long time at table. The meal is enlivened by much conversation, and sometimes by song, in which servants and guests all join. Plates, knives, and bread are kept in a cupboard let into the wall, and the knives are not changed with every dish.—Cornhill Magazine.

Extinction of a Family.

A remarkable instance of the extinction of a family has occurred near Roxana, N. C. Jacob Evans and his wife died a year or two ago and left two sons and two daughters. An unmarried brother of Mrs. Evans named Taylor also lived for the most of his time with the children. A short time ago one of the daughters, who had married meanwhile, died. In a little while Taylor died. In a week or two more the other daughter died, and was followed to the grave in a few days more by one of the brothers. The other brother and only remaining fragment of the family has been for some time at the point of death, though at present is reported better. These deaths have occurred within the space of little more than a month. The family are said to have been mentally weak, and when death removed the first the rest gave way to melancholy and died.—North Carolina Paper.

A Nantucket young man attended a tea party at the house of his sweet heart's pious uncle and was requested to ask a blessing. His unfamiliarity with the subject and his unusual lack of self-possession produced this: "I don't care for any, thank you." He lost the girl.—Providence (R. I.) Journal.

The McKee Claim.

We said nothing which implied any censure upon Judge Phister for presenting the petition of Samuel McKee, asking congress to pay him $1,718 for alleged expenses incurred in contesting the seat of John D. Young in congress. Judge Phister could not do otherwise than present the petition when respectfully asked to do so; but Mr. McKee not being a constituent of Judge Phister's might have confided that duty with more propriety to his own representative, Mr. Willis. But the presentation of the petition has nothing to do with the merits of McKee's claim, and we do not intend that this false issue shall divert us from the purpose of exposing the iniquity of McKee's claim to be reimbursed for expenses incurred in prosecuting his false pretensions to Mr. Young's seat in Congress.

McKee was not elected by the people. He had been shamefully beaten by a majority of about 1,500 of the legal voters. He had admitted in the presence of Thomas L. Givens, Judge Plummer, Dr. R. A. Lightfoot, Dennis Belt and others in the streets of Flemingsburg, while the returns of the election were coming in, that "Young is elected by 1,000 votes majority, but I will be your next representative in congress." He well knew that when he made this defiant boast in the public streets, that the radical majority in congress were to be depended upon to defraud Young of his seat, and then he set to work to have himself "counted in" and Young "counted out." In the face of a clear and well established majority of the legal votes cast for Young, the house of representatives gave the seat to McKee because his extreme radicalism was preferable to the Democratic sentiments of Young. It was a fraud upon Mr. Young and upon the good people of this congressional district, who were thus deprived of the right to choose and have their own representative.

If Judge Phister in the last congress obtained for Judge Young "near $8,000 for his salary and mileage in addition to $2,500 that he had previously received for his expenses of the contest," it was an admission by congress that Young was entitled to it, and that he had been wronged by giving the seat to McKee. McKee got his salary and mileage when he got the seat of Mr. Young, and that was more than he was rightfully entitled to. To now give him $1,718 more, under the pretence of paying for expenses he incurred in contesting the seat, would be little less than stealing from the treasury under the forms of the law. We are opposed to this depletion of the treasury. If such nefarious practices are to be pursued we hope no democrat will lend his countenance to them.

LEON MICHEL GAMBETTA, the French statesman, who has been sinking for several days past, died on Monday morning.

The state printer has been instructed to publish the report of the pardons called for by the last legislature. There will be three hundred and fifty pages of them.

The average sum paid operatives per annum in the wool, cotton, and silk manufacturing of the United States is $846.08 each. The average annual stipend of laborers in woolen mills is $293.05; in cotton mills, $240.17; and in silk, $264.45. Pennsylvania voted against General Hancock because employees in "protected" industries were made to believe that a reduction of the tariff would result in the reduction of wages. It is now demonstrated that the more the government gives the great mill and mine owners, the less they pay their employees. The government only ministers to the growing greed for gold. The more that is given the more they demand, and the less the pay of laborers.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER." Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE." Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN." Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON." Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

THE new steamer Will S. Hays passed down the river from Pittsburg yesterday. She will run in the Cincinnati and New Orleans trade.

WM. HARRIS and Hannah Braxton, colored citizens, celebrated the new year by having themselves joined in the holy bonds of matrimony.

AN oyster supper given Monday evening by Miss Tillie Eitel to a number of her friends, was a very pleasant affair and much enjoyed by all present.

WM. RAGAN, son of David Ragan, died at Flemingsburg, on Sunday night, of heart disease. He was well known in this city and had many friends here.

THE Rev. John F. Coons, brother of Mrs. S. L. Blaine, of this city, died at Cincinnati on Monday. He was well known to many of our citizens who will be grieved to hear of his death.

THE union parer and corer, a very useful household article for peeling fruit and vegetables, is being introduced in this city by Mr. H. C. Ballenger. It sells readily and is highly valued by all who have used it.

CHAS. KIRKPATRICK has been arrested at Portsmouth for bastardy, on a charge preferred by Mary Debo. They are both school children, one fourteen and the other fifteen years of age, the children of wealthy farmers of the neighborhood.

THERE are ordinances of our city against throwing ashes, dirt or trash in the streets and the police officers are charged with the duty of reporting all instances of the kind to the mayor for prosecution. It is very strange this duty is never attended to. Some of our streets are so encumbered with ashes and other filth as to be almost impassable by vehicles, and are becoming standing nuisances.

THE election held in Chester on Monday to select a board of council resulted in the following persons being chosen:

First Ward—George Hardin, Bud Fristoe,
Second Ward—Chas. P. Dieterich, Lewis N. Holiday.
Third Ward—James Stephens, Henry Port and J. F. Lee received the same number of votes.

A mayor, clerk, marshal and treasurer will be chosen at a meeting of the council to be held on Thursday evening.

BARLOW, WILSON & Co's. minstrel troupe which is to appear here to-morrow evening is one of the largest companies now traveling. There are twenty-five performers in the company all of whom will be upon the stage at one time. If our citizens wish to witness a really good entertainment they will not fail to attend this one. The Dayton (Ohio) Journal says:

As was expected, Music Hall was crowded last night to witness the entertainment given by Barlow, Wilson & Co. This is one of the best minstrel troupes in the country, and the entertainment at matinee and night yesterday was one of the best shows in this line in Dayton, for years. Miss Barlow and George Wilson are a whole show in themselves. The songs in the first part were gems in their way, while the gags were all new, neat and good. The olio was especially strong; it is safe to say the best ever introduced in Dayton.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29, 1882.

The celebration of Christmas, even in the absence of congressmen, is an event that is attended by many occurrences quite characteristic of Washington; and although the shooting of toy pistols, and the usual ringing of cow-bells and tooting of long tin horns, was strictly prohibited by proclamation of the police authorities, there was no lack of enthusiasm manifested by the disciples of the meek and lowly Nazarine, as attested by the fact that no less than one hundred and twenty-seven arrests are reported by the police for the twenty-four hours ending at midnight of the 25th instant. All castes were represented except the respectable, who, as usual, were allowed privileges which are considered criminal when indulged in by the poor, and our city barometer, Father Snell, had the ordinary discernment of determining the grades of crime between the exhilaration of the well-dressed bummer and the drunken tramp with shabby clothes, each of which were designated by the amount of punishment imposed as a penalty for the indulgence. The holidays thus far have proved less fatal to life than usual, however, owing doubtless to the wise precautions taken by the authorities, as thus far murder and homicide has claimed no victim, which is quite an unusual occurrence during the first days of these holy festivities.

The amendment to the army bill transferring the pay department to the quartermaster General's office has brought to light some peculiar facts and peculiar theories. General Browne, in his speech in favor of the amendment, stated that under the present system it takes 54 paymasters to pay 20,000 men, or one for every 400 soldiers or about 2½ for every regiment. This is no greater disproportion, however, than is found in other branches of the service, as we find about 3,000 officers, commanding only 20,000 men, or about one in seven! These proportions look ridiculous and unnecessary, but if we maintain any nucleus of an army, and are forced to keep an establishment for the purpose of perpetuating a knowledge of military science, it should be as closely confined to the smallest number, both in men and officers, as circumstances will admit. Abuses will attach to any system we can imagine, and our present one is not free from objection, but it is preferable to any European system for our uses, and the recommendations to increase the regular army is looked upon with suspicion and treated freely with unfavorable comment by the people's representatives from all the middle and western states.

Notwithstanding the depleted ranks of congress, a great scramble is made to conciliate the dear people, among whom is to be found the Rotund Robeson, who is doubtless looking to future events in 1884, but whether the old tactics, of introducing public bills for political buncombe, will succeed in drawing the wool over the eyes of the people remains to be seen. The experience of some of the Republican leaders in the last elections would not seem to warrant the experiment, but the lack of other Republican ammunition may induce the attempt.

The rumored and unexpected departure of Political Assessment Hubbell to unknown parts, (it is suggested,) has some connection with an article that appeared in the Detroit Evening News, evidently intended to advance the interests of said Hubbell in his senatorial aspirations, at the expense of Woman's Industrial league, upon whom it reflected, and whose lively and irrepressible female president demanded a retraction at his hands, or satisfaction under the Virginia code. If this is the true solution of the sudden leave, it reflects credit upon his well known discretion in avoiding personal encounters.

The present theme in political circles is the Pendleton civil service bill as it has passed the senate. Comment is usually confined to provisions which require the appointment of a number of high salaried commissioners and other officials whose duty is to assist in carrying out its provisions. As it is evident that it will meet with strong opposition in the house, comment upon its provisions are withheld until another occasion, when its features are more thoroughly understood.

Whatever of cheerfulness there may exist in regard to the future prospects of the Republican party, it is an unquestionable fact that many of its most stalwart supporters despair of its future, and do not hesitate to predict, that unless some new issue is brought forward, its usefulness (if it ever possessed any) is a thing of the past. Query. Has 100 years of political strife under our system brought the old tory and anti-federalists once more face to face, and will the people once more triumph as of old under the banners of old time anti-federal Jeffersonian Democracy? The people say, amen. "THAYATT."

NOTICE.

IT having been asserted that I am preparing to move to the country and give up my interest in the Sewing Machine business, I take this method of announcing to my friends and the public that there is not a word of truth in it except that I will move my family to the country but will continue to sell the OLD RELIABLE SINGER at the same place, second street, opposite postoffice, and run my wagons in the country as heretofore. Competitors please notice the above. I am thankful to the public for the large patronage I have received for the past nine years, and respectfully solicit a share in the future.

A literary society was organized Tuesday night at the residence of Mr. H. Brookings. The name of the infant and officers will be given next week. May it live long and its life be a profitable, instructive and interesting one, is the wish of your correspondent.

A man that can worry with a balky horse three hours, coaxing him to pull an empty wagon and finally resolves not to leave the spot until the horse and wagon does, has a determination and patience that will do to tie to. The gentleman is a resident of Maysville, and was in this place Friday.

The masquerade party at the residence of Mr. John Stevenson, Wednesday night, of last week, given to the numerous friends of his amiable daughters, Misses Annie and Minnie, was as predicted by your correspondent, the crowning event of the holiday season in this vicinity. Near fifty invited guests were present, probably forty of the number being masked. The following is a list of the persons masked, together with the characters represented: Miss Lidia Duryea, Egyptian countess; Miss Etna Prather, Priestess; Miss Nannie Brookings, Gypsy fortune teller; Miss Lena Fleming, house girl; Miss Minnie Pollitt, red riding hood; Miss Clara Howe, news girl; Miss Lidia Rhodes, pink; Miss Ora Hunter, American Indian wife—jurro; Miss Ollie Galbreath, night; Miss Minnie Stevens, news girl; Miss Fannie McCarthy, night; Miss Mollie McCarthy, Indian squaw; Miss Mattie Kilgore, sister of charity; Miss Nannie Tarleton, Japanese woman; Miss Mary Tarleton, aged grandmother; Miss Mattie Tarleton, popcorn girl; Miss Anna Stevens, ghost; John Wright, lager beer dutchman; Charley Parry, devil; Merrell Parry, Kentucky gray; Thomas Parry, Turk, Lewis Parry, moon struck boy; Charley Fleming, Indian Chief; John Fleming, gentleman of color; William Worthington, Mary's coon; Condit Stevenson, tinner; Joe Stevenson, Hindoo; Will Stevenson, ghost; Charley Biggers, devil; Thomas Crawford, Hamlet's ghost; J. B. Hunter, Oscar Wild; Otto Mullin; Dinan, the cook; Taylor Tarleton, confederate soldier. Each one acted his particular role, well, and most all were disguised in such a manner as to frustrate their most intimate friends in their endeavors to find them out, and two hours of real fun was the result. The refreshments, after unmasking were beautiful, elegant, and served in the highest style of the culinary art. It is hardly necessary to remark that the guests did full and ample justice to this part of the program, and no doubt remarked that "it is well to be here." The young ladies spared no pains to make the evening's entertainment a pleasant one, and we may safely say that all present fully appreciated their endeavors, and will remember the occasion as a brilliant affair. May every effort of a like character undertaken by them in the future be rewarded with as great success. ONE EYE OPEN.
